PHILOSOPHY

Mark is a professional who does not simply deliver the same package of golf lessons to every person he teaches, but offers a bespoke lesson to truly suit the needs of each person. He takes into account every individuals learning style and needs, as we know through research that every one learns in a different way. Mark's Golf lessons are tailored to each person so that they get the most out of their lesson.

Generally speaking there are three distinct learning styles, Kinesthetic (learning through action), audio (learning through listening) and visual (learning through watching). People generally learn best through one of these methods but can learn through a mixture of methods. Mark believes that it is getting the method right for each person, that allows for a successful lesson and for real improvements to be made, not only in the short term but over the course of the golfers life span, so effectively the golfer can continue to learn, develop and grow. Mark doesn't believe in short term 'quick fixes' that essentially create different problems for the golfer but believes in getting it right from the start to create long term success!

His roots in golf are traditional, generational passed on down from father to son through a real love of the game. Mark is also passing on the golf bug across generations, as many of his individual lessons are bringing their sons and daughters for junior coaching with him. Golf simply is for everyone!
